A Visit to Your Nebraska Legislature

guided by George W. Norris,
“the Father of the Unicameral”

UNICAM KIDS

Hil! I'm George Norris. I represented Nebraska in Congress from 1913 to 1943. Many people call me the father of Nebraska's unicameral Legislature.

A unicameral is a legislature made up of just one group of people who make laws. Nebraska has the nation's only unicameral, which meets here at the Capitol in Lincoln to make laws for the state.

I believed this would serve Nebraskans better than a bicameral, or two-house system, found in every other state. Nebraskans voted to change to a unicameral in 1934 and the first unicameral met in 1937.

Let's go inside. I'll show you around!

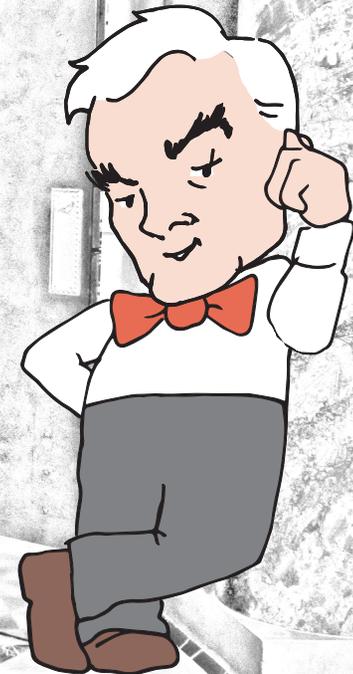

Nebraska is unique for its unicameral and also its unusual Capitol building. Architect Bertram Goodhue wanted the Capitol's design to reflect the spirit of Nebraska's people. The words and pictures on the outside of the building show Nebraska's place in the history of law and democracy. The Capitol took 10 years to build and was finished in 1932. The tower rises almost 400 feet and is topped by a 19-foot bronze statue of a man planting seeds called "The Sower."

My experience as a law-maker made me wish for a smoother process to make laws. I encouraged Nebraskans to vote for a new, smaller legislature so the process would be simpler and allow for more public input.

Some Nebraskans worried about becoming the only unicameral. They thought having fewer steps to pass laws might not allow for enough discussion on bills.

But supporters said three rounds of debate on a bill would be plenty. In the end, there was enough support to adopt the new unicameral!

The unicameral Legislature meets in the room through these doors. The room, or chamber, contains the same wooden desks and leather chairs that were built when the Capitol was constructed. The voting board at the front of the chamber lists all the senators' names and displays their votes — green for "yes" and red for "no."

Now let's walk downstairs to the senators' offices. There are 49 senators in the Nebraska Legislature. Each senator represents an area of the state called a district that has about 37,000 people living in it.

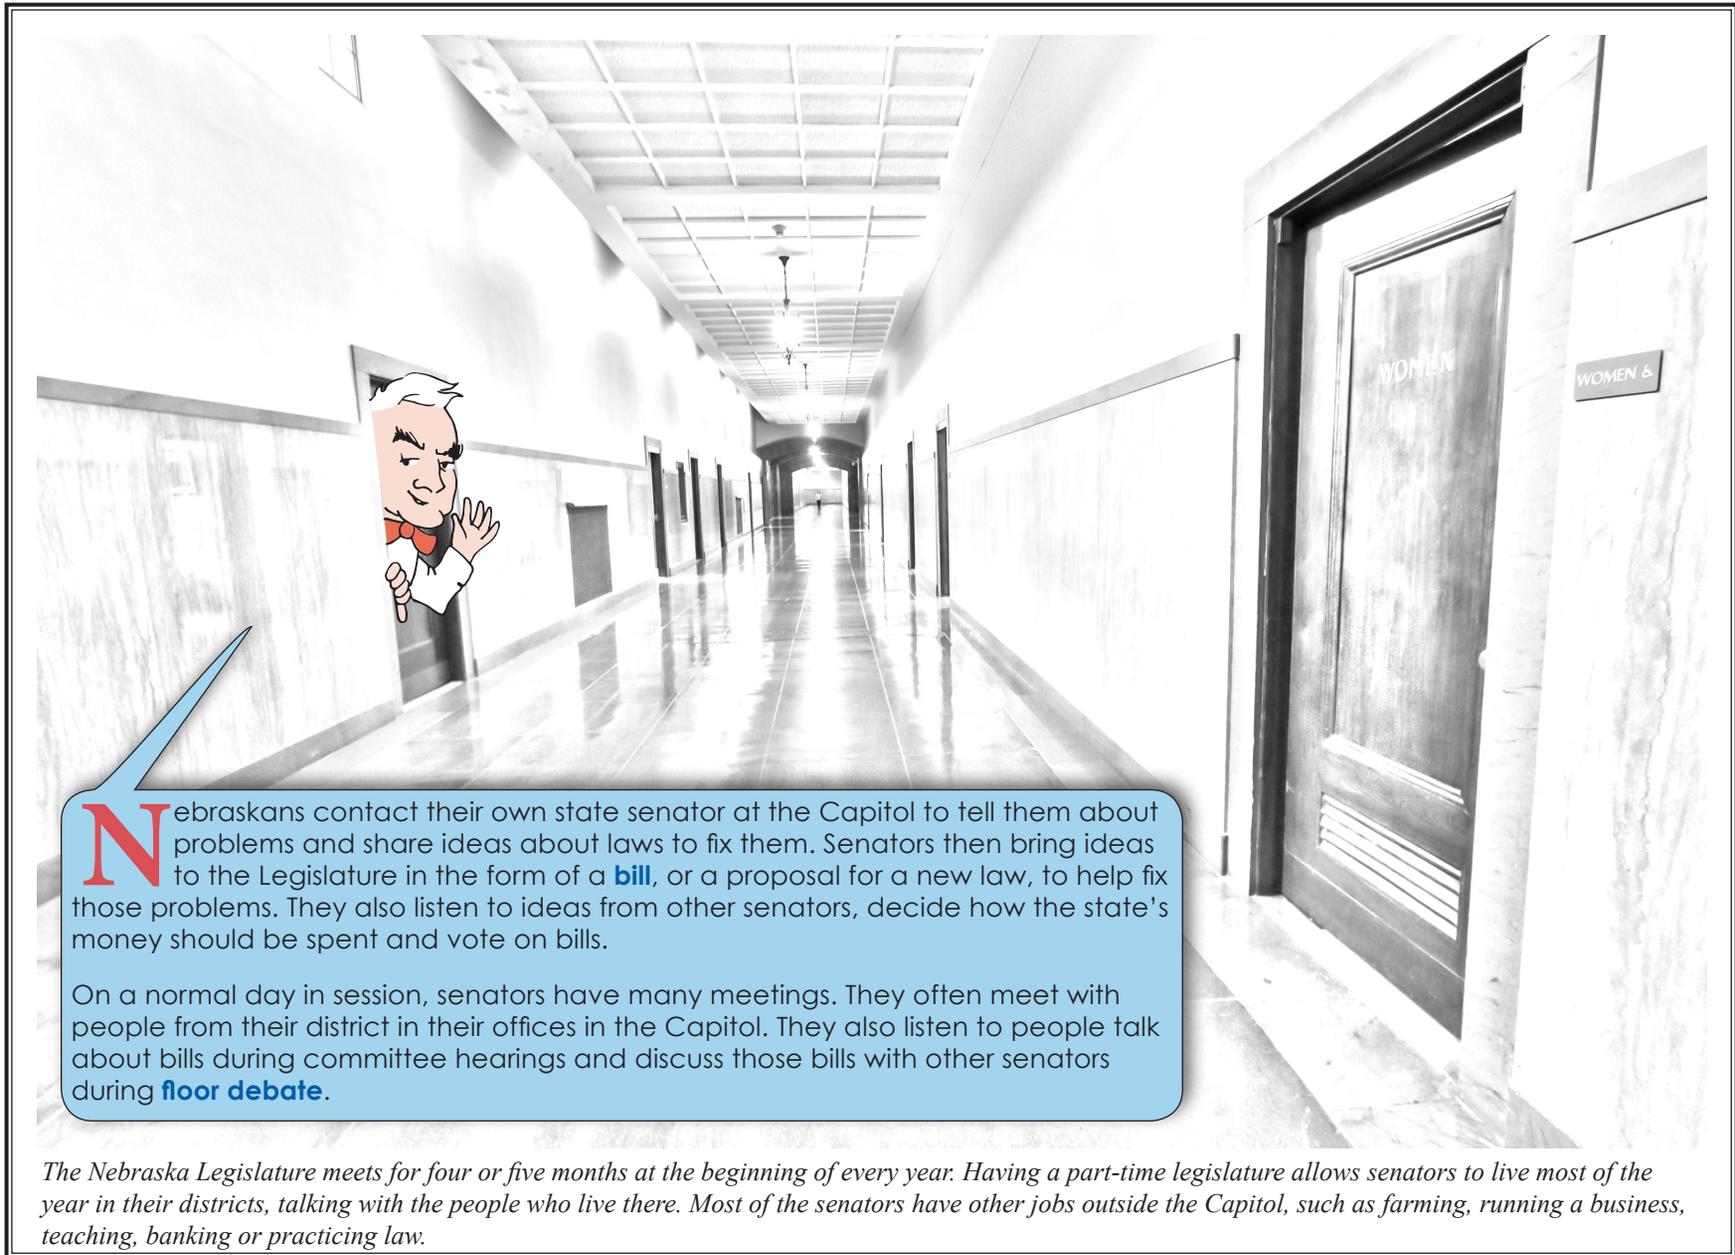

Senators serve four years and then must be re-elected to serve another four. They are elected by the people in their districts.

The senators work together to create laws for the state. Laws are the rules that tell people how to act in society. People who do not follow the laws may be arrested, fined or both.

This is the Great Hall that leads to the legislative chamber. The six murals on the wall, along with the other artworks in the Capitol's interior, represent the relationship between Nebraska's people and their environment. "The Blizzard of 1888," a mural by Jeanne Reynal, shows a Nebraska teacher leading her students to safety during the worst snowstorm in the state's history. Artist Hildreth Meiere designed the marble murals on the floor.

A VISIT TO YOUR NEBRASKA LEGISLATURE

Nebraskans contact their own state senator at the Capitol to tell them about problems and share ideas about laws to fix them. Senators then bring ideas to the Legislature in the form of a bill, or a proposal for a new law, to help fix those problems. They also listen to ideas from other senators, decide how the state's money should be spent and vote on bills.

On a normal day in session, senators have many meetings. They often meet with people from their district in their offices in the Capitol. They also listen to people talk about bills during committee hearings and discuss those bills with other senators during floor debate.

The Nebraska Legislature meets for four or five months at the beginning of every year. Having a part-time legislature allows senators to live most of the year in their districts, talking with the people who live there. Most of the senators have other jobs outside the Capitol, such as farming, running a business, teaching, banking or practicing law.

Every bill introduced has a public hearing in a committee. A committee is a small group of senators. Public hearings give people the chance to tell senators what they think about the bill. This helps senators decide whether the bill should be passed and how it should be written.

If the committee thinks the bill is good, it votes to send it to the floor for a full debate among all the senators. What's the floor? Come on, I'll show you.

The senators sit at the front of the room listening to the person speaking into the microphone. The people watching the hearing are waiting for their turn to speak in support of, or against, the bill. Notice the media is there to report on the hearing. Many students have spoken at committee hearings about issues affecting schools, safety and the environment.

LAWS MADE BY KIDS

Students all across the country have brought ideas for bills to their state legislature to address a problem they see in their community. Here are some inspiring examples of bills that were suggested by students and made into law.

Bullying is a big problem for many kids. A group of students at Mansfeld Middle School in Tucson, Arizona decided to speak up for victims of bullying. They wrote a bill that would require every school district to have anti-bullying rules. Their state representative introduced the bill for them and it became a law.

Drug-free zones around schools and parks help keep kids safe by increasing punishments for drug use near places where children gather. In Nebraska, however, parks without playground equipment were not made drug-free zones. Students at Omaha's Alice Buffett Magnet Middle School wanted to protect these areas, too. They talked to their state senator and he introduced a bill for them, which was passed into law.

The cost to provide electricity to Twinfield Union School in Vermont was very high and the school needed to save money. A group of eighth-graders learned about a renewable source of energy that uses water, called hydropower. The students testified at a state senate hearing to support a bill that would make it easier to use this cheaper form of energy at their school. Lawmakers changed the process to allow smaller projects like this to be more easily approved.

Air drying laundry on a clothesline saves electricity and also is good for the environment. The state of Colorado did not allow people to have clotheslines until students at Basalt High School took action. They supported a bill in the Colorado Legislature and also convinced their town council to support the bill.

When a committee votes to send a bill to the floor, it comes here next. This is the west chamber, also called the George W. Norris Legislative Chamber — after yours truly.

All the senators meet here to discuss ways to improve bills before voting on them. During three rounds of debate, senators often must compromise to come to an agreement. Then the bill goes to the governor for approval.

The gold leaf scenes painted on the wooden ceiling beams show the European cultures that settled in Nebraska. The public can come anytime and watch their senators from the balconies above the floor. Under the balconies, you will see senators' staff and members of the media who report the Legislature's actions to the public.

REVIEW: HOW A BILL BECOMES A LAW

1 When the Legislature is not meeting, senators research ideas that have been brought to them. They work with staff to write a bill that will solve the problem.

3 There are three rounds of debate on each bill. It takes at least 25 senators' votes — just over half of the 49 senators — to change a bill or move it to the next round. If a bill gets at least 25 votes on the last round, it is passed.

2 After a bill is introduced, it is given a public hearing. If the committee thinks the bill is a good idea, it sends it to the floor for debate. If there is not support for the bill, it stays in committee or is killed.

4 After a bill is passed, it goes to the governor for approval. He or she can sign the bill or veto it. If a bill is vetoed, senators can still try to make it law, but it takes 30 votes to do it.

See how simple that was? If we had a bicameral system, the process would be twice as long! There is so much to learn about our Legislature and our Capitol that I couldn't possibly cover it all in one tour.

You can learn more about our unique unicameral at NebraskaLegislature.gov. Visit capitol.nebraska.gov to learn more about our beautiful Capitol. Read more about my public service at NebraskaHistory.org/sites/norris.

Or, when you are in downtown Lincoln, stop by to see for yourself where our unicameral meets.

Tell them George Norris sent you! Until then, let's review some vocabulary that will come in handy.
